Chris Chandler CEO, Proton International

Chris Chandler, MBA, MHS, has more than 25 years' experience in the healthcare industry ranging from frontline clinical experience in laboratory medicine to significant operational and project development positions in both private and academic settings. He has developed, opened and operated four proton centers as senior vice president of ProCure Treatment Centers, and developed proton therapy programs as vice president and general manager of IBA Proton Therapy.

Chandler established himself in healthcare management as an HMO developer at the Blue Cross Blue Shield system in Florida where he became skilled in healthcare finance and reimbursement. Leveraging his insurance experience, he held executive level roles in academic medicine, operating the Department of Pathology for the School of Medicine at the University of Florida; and serving as administrator of the James Graham Brown Cancer Center at the University of Louisville, where he guided a multidisciplinary academic cancer program.

Chandler developed major proton therapy programs in North America as the vice president and general manager of IBA Proton Therapy. He joined ProCure Treatment Centers, a private enterprise that develops and operates proton centers, where he oversaw the development of their centers and served as president of ProCure's Chicago-area center.

Chandler holds a Bachelor of Science in Medical Technology, a Master of Science and a Master of Business Administration in Healthcare Administration from the University of Florida.
